

Dr. L. S. Rowe, director of the Pan-American Union, in whose home the great international conference on limitation of armament and Far Eastern affairs will be held.
(c) Underwood & Underwood

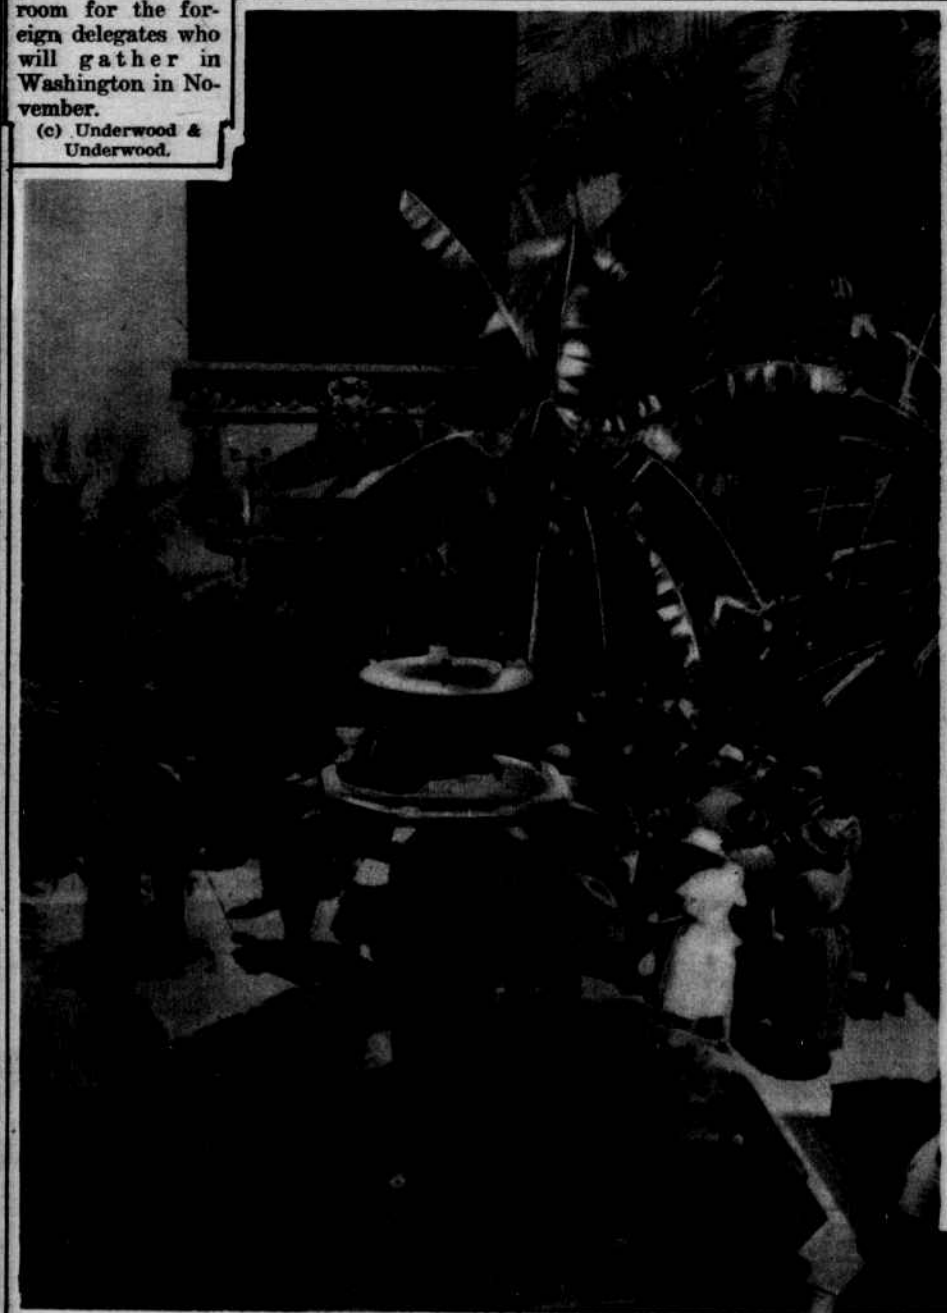

Hall of the Americas in the Pan-American Building, Washington, D. C., in which the Armament Conference, called by President Harding for Nov. 11, probably will be held.
International.

Front view of the imposing building, one of the most beautiful in Washington, in which the representatives of many nations will meet.
International.

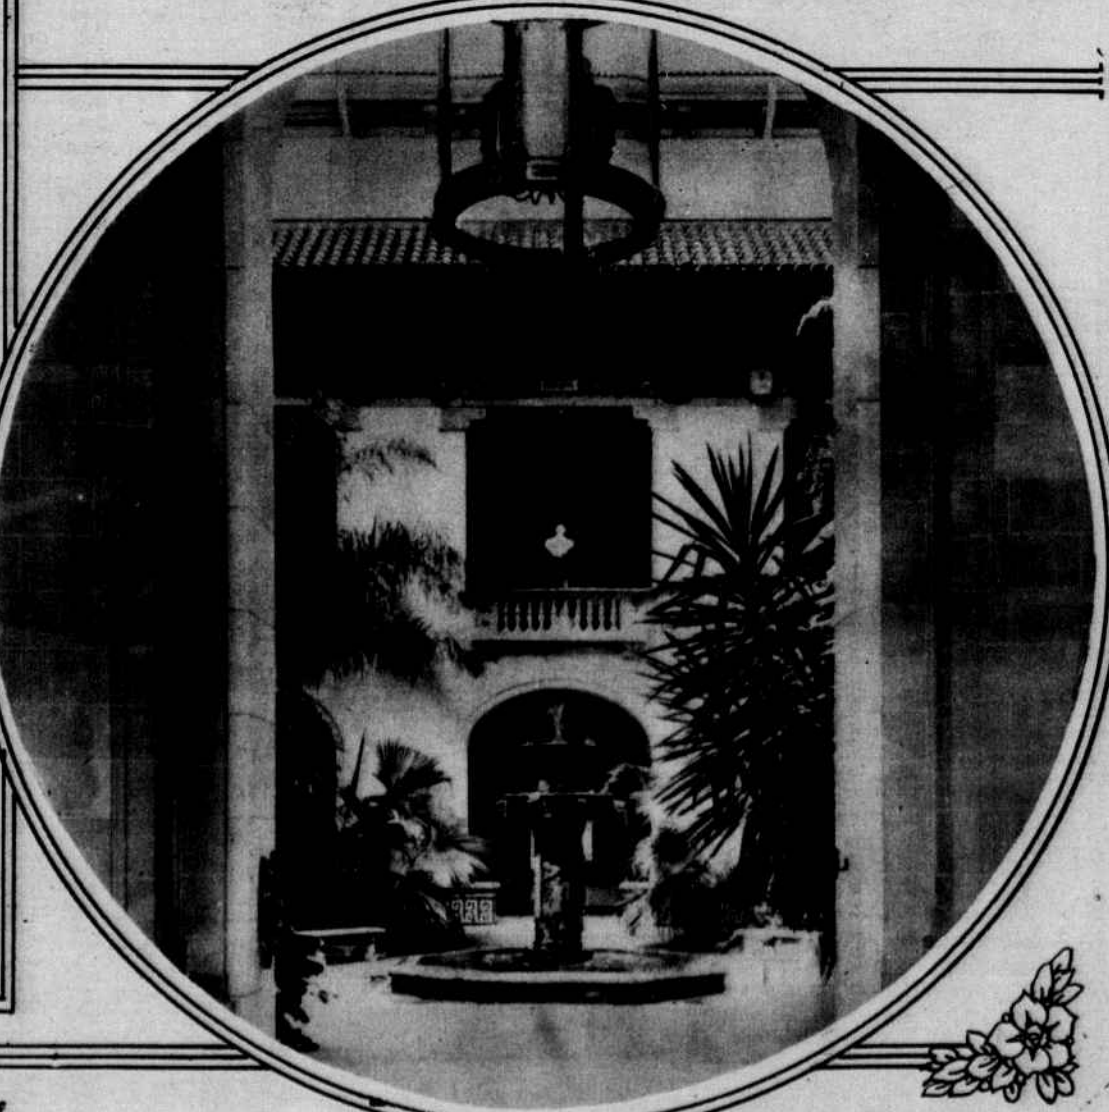

Upon the shoulders of Basil Miles, whose photograph is printed here, rests the responsible task of providing living quarters and office room for the foreign delegates who will gather in Washington in November.
(c) Underwood & Underwood.

View of the fountain and palm gardens from one of the Spanish windows on the second floor of the Pan-American Union Building.
International.

A new photograph of Secretary of State Hughes, showing him leaving the White House after a conference with the President on foreign affairs.
(c) Harris & Ewing.

A tropical air is given to the structure chosen for the armament conference by the spacious interior court, adorned with fronded palms and the rich green foliage of the lands to the south.
International.